

“There is no immunisation for being human.”

– Pollyanna Lenkic

The world of work benefits from us bringing ourselves fully to what we do. That means bringing all of who we are. Being present and allowing others to do the same.

For decades people were trained to leave their humanity at the door and to pick it up on the way out.

This came at a high cost and still does.

What would bringing your courageous self to work today mean for you and your team?

How would you start your day? Your meetings?

What lens would you bring to the mistakes discovered?

Leaders who Create Leaders foster a humanistic approach in their leadership.

Pollyanna